Understanding care delivery financing - strategic imperative for all health professionals. By Geraldine Bednash This is an important piece of work on one of the major issues driving health care delivery today - the cost of health care and the responding changes in how health care delivery is financed. Dr. Rambur has written an excellent review of how today's health care delivery is being financed, the major policy discussions around that financing, and the systems of financing that will drive policy decisions into the future. The major concern about this book is that it is titled as a work for nurses. In fact, this is a book that all health professional students should use to help them understand how the care they deliver will be financed and how it will shape the expectations for their accountability in providing that care. Well done. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. The book's content fulfills one of the AACN's key Essentials of Baccalaureate Education. Written by a health economics and policy expert, former dean, and award-winning teacher, the text synthesizes the vast scope of health economics to create an easily understandable guide for nursing action from bedside to boardroom. The text describes the relationship between nursing and health care economics and traces the history of our health care system from the early 1900s through today. It contrasts the economics of health care with that of classic free markets and discusses the intersection of ethics and economics, providing nurses with the ethical tools to thoughtfully consider dilemmas arising from today's focus on the bottom line. The book describes how to use economic principles to shape organizations and public policy and includes a step-by-step, skillbuilding guide to enhancing professional influence through participation on governing boards. Complex financial principles are broken down to facilitate understanding for nurses with no prior knowledge of this discipline. The book also includes relevant information on the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act and is compatible with online teaching and coursework.
