Wilson "Hell Come A Walkin'" is the story in this book that is most representative of the Predator -- human conflict storyline; it features excellent dark art by Dean Ormston and a meaningful storyline by Nancy Collins; the human characters find themselves in the conflict of the Civil War, dealing with their personal issues when they encounter the destructive ability of the Predator, which makes them bond together for survival. The other stories with their bright colors and funky art were not as interesting and representative. 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. If you are a fan of the predator universe this ...By KPIf you are a fan of the predator universe this an amusing romp through that universe. I didn't want it to end.

Across the centuries, humanity's capacity for violence has marked time as surely as the movement of the stars. And from those very stars have come an invisible participant in our history, the extraterrestrial Predator, who has used Mankind's own penchant for murder and mayhem as a shadow to cover its own bloody tracks, as a hunting blind from which to take down its human prey. But the Predator has not passed through the ages unnoticed, and despite the alien killer's strength, cunning, and advanced technology, there are few things more certain than how far men are willing to go when it's time for a little payback!
