This book is a comprehensive text on the subject of the comanagement of cataract surgery patients between optometrists and ophthalmologists. Due to the increased sharing of these patients in today's ophthalmic community, this textbook is a hallmark in providing the necessary information to clinicians desiring to include this type of eye care in their practices. This book covers the presurgical considerations and postsurgical complications that optometrists will encounter and describes succinctly the appropriate treatment plans. This book provides scientific background on trends in cataract patient care, cataractogenesis, intraocular lenses, surgical intervention, preoperative and postoperative evaluation, assessment, treatment, and management. Photographs throughout allow clinical teaching and comparison.
