Doug Tennapel : Ratfist before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Ratfist:

Allow me to break it down.Ratfist began as a webcomic that released one page a day, so there is a gag at the end of almost every page. In this way, it kept me constantly laughing. Not all of the humor is simple gags, however. TenNapel takes shots at everything from politics to religion (but not in an offensive way) and also includes plenty of situational humor. Even some of the illustrations made me laugh; they can be crazy! The art style is chaotic, but not sloppy. The colors are spectacular. As an cartoonist myself, I was able to greatly enjoy its beauty while reading. The characters are very expressive. The story is interesting. It starts off being relatable, being about a relationship, but then it gets crazy, then crazier, then insanity ensues, but closes quietly - the ending is so touching it almost made me cry. I highly recommend this book to anyone who isn't uber-sensitive to political or religious issues (you'd have to be pretty serious to be offended by this light-hearted humor, though). It's worth the money, and is readable multiple times (I keep discovering deeper ideas re-reading it). 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. A Must-Read for Fans of Doug TenNapel and Comics in General By LPetal86A very interesting, semi-autobiographical work of Doug TenNapel, the creator of Earthworm Jim and other eccentric and memorable characters. The story addresses a lot of issues affecting modern America today, with some subtle and strong satire commenting on things like how the current generation of Americans have become largely self-obsessed and need to grow up a bit. Doug develops the main character very well, and his sharp, eye-catching artwork pleases (and kudos to his colorist, Katherine Garner, as well!). My only complaint is the pacing felt a bit rushed in places, but I would recommend this book nonetheless to someone looking for an interesting take on politics, religion, learning to be selfless, and contemplating the meaning of life. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five Stars By Maria MacKay thumbs up Earthworm Jim creator Doug Tennapel is publishing his Webcomic Ratfist, a vigilante-in-tights that satirizes comics, politics, philosophy, and even Tennapel himself! Featuring a forward written by MST3K/RiffTraxx's Michael J. Nelson, and pin-ups by Ryan Ottley, Scott Kurtz, Christopher Hastings, and Ethan Nicolle.
