Matt Fraction : Satellite Sam Vol. 1 before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Satellite Sam Vol. 1:

Plenty Of Sleaze, But Something's MissingBy DirkIt's an old-fashioned behind-the-scenes tinseltown mystery, with the big change this time being that it's about a ridiculous children's serial in the early days of television. The art is gorgeous, though I really wish they hadn't gone with the stylistic decision of BW. The writing is solid, but frankly, one feels Fraction had a great idea that he somewhat lost interest in once he actually had to do it: there's none of the energy of Hawkeye or Sex Criminals here. I'm tempted to say that simply due to the more dramatic material, but considering the amount of sleaze and showbiz tomfoolery that's played for laughs, I don't know. The first volume didn't set me on fire, but I do think I'll be collecting the rest, if for nothing other than the art. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Promising but not yet delivered By C. D. Varn

Matt Fraction and Howard Chaykin's Satellite Sam is a noir with lots of sex, violence, and black and white art. The 1950s area setting feels very "Madmen" in both a good and derivative way. Fraction does do a lot to get setting and dialogue right, but the authenticity actually hurts the readability of the comic. Furthermore, if one is used to Sex Criminals or Fractions mainstream work, a lot of the humor he normally has is gone in this comic. Lack of exposition, which can sometimes be refreshingly en medias res approach in noir, also slows this down. That said, Fraction's storytelling and Chaykin's line work do keep my reading. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful. Five Stars

Love Howard Chaykin's work.

SEX - DEATH - LIVE TV!
NEW YORK CITY, 1951: The star of beloved daily television serial "Satellite Sam" turns up dead in a flophouse filled with dirty secrets. The police think it was death by natural causes but his son knows there was something more? if only he could sober up long enough to do something about it. This noir mystery shot through with sex and violence exposes the seedy underbelly of the golden age of television. By MATT FRACTION (CASANOVA, Hawkeye, FF) and HOWARD CHAYKIN (BLACK KISS I II, AMERICAN FLAGG!). - See more at: <https://www.imagecomics.com/comics/releases/satellite-sam-1#sthash.kqMo358Z.dpuf>
"No one does sordid and illicit better than the combined talents of both of these creators. Chaykin brings just about everything to this comic that he's known for: carefully executed panel layouts, layered storytelling, a hunky lead character, and -- right there on the opening pages -- plenty of fishnet stockings and leather teddies. Fraction brings the spark of an engaging idea and peppers it with authentic dialogue amidst a cool setting, but it's Chaykin that ignites it and cooks the whole thing up with a flavor and feel that's unmistakably his." -Comic Book Resources
"It's a testament to Fraction and Chaykin's talents that a book spanning such an intricate series of storylines can keep us consistently interested and involved; the sense of forward momentum that this story has built up is impressive. At the same time, the emotional dimension of this story can't be denied. "Satellite Sam" is about as much fun as you can have while feeling like you're seeing something you shouldn't, and one of the more involving, implicating comic-reading experiences to be had." -
